Webinar Series jointly organized by IUFRO Task Force 'Transforming Forest Landscapes for Future Climates and Human Well-Being' and EU Green Deal project SUPERB 'Systemic solutions for or upscaling of urgent ecosystem restoration for forest-related biodiversity and ecosystem services'

Objectives: Forest and forest landscape restoration is higher up on the global political agenda than ever, raising a widespread awareness among many stakeholders, including the general public. The urgency to conserve and restore biodiversity and to halt and reverse climate change calls for a timely scientific exchange across disciplines and open discussion on approaches, benefits and challenges of forest restoration and adaptation.

In our new Webinar Series "Monthly Forest Restoration Talks" we will investigate forest restoration questions from diverse scientific perspectives with alternating focus on global level (responsibility Task Force) and European level (responsibility SUPERB). This includes challenges with terminology, and also exploring practical forest restoration approaches and experiences worldwide.

Audience: Researchers, practitioners, NGOs, policy makers, other interested stakeholders

When: Every second Wednesday of the month at 4:00 PM (CET), starting in November 2022. Duration: 90 min.

Who will be presenting/discussing: IUFRO Task Force members, SUPERB project partners, other invited researchers, practice experts and other key stakeholders, depending on the topic.

How: Different formats, all interactive: E.g., single 30min keynote presentation followed by Q&A, 2-3 shorter presentations followed by an open discussion, 50min panel discussion with introductory statements of panelists followed by questions from the audience, pro and contra discussion, etc.
